“Our vision of making the impossible, possible demands of us a commitment to excellence in every regard and in every detail,” said Nelson “Chris” Stokes, chairman and CEO of the Jamaica Bobsleigh and Skeleton Federation. “For our athletes, nutrition is a huge part of that. We are very happy to be working with USANA on this grand project. We trust USANA because of its commitment to clean sport, the quality and efficacy of its products, and its track record of fueling athletes to over 276 Olympic and Para-Olympic medals and 617 World titles.”

The JBSF provides an opportunity for Jamaican male and female athletes to participate in the sport of bobsleigh and skeleton at both a development and elite level, with the clear goal of producing World and Olympic Champions.

“I am really excited about this new partnership with the JBSF and I think it will be a big success for both parties,” said Brent Neidig, USANA’s chief commercial officer. “We have such a unique roster of sponsored athletes and teams, that it shows how athletes from all sports can benefit from a training regime that includes USANA products. I can’t wait to root the team on during the 2026 Olympics, I know they will make us all proud.”
